Captain C. Taylor and son George, returned home a few days ago from a month's visit with relatives in the east. The gentlemen had an excellent time among the green hills and valleys of old New York state, but the pure air and freedom of the desert suit them far better.

Dennis May, one of the oldest prospectors and miners in the Yavapai country, died at the Sisters Hospital in Prescott a few days ago. Mr. May was one of the earliest locators of the famous Congress mine, in the south part of Yavapai county. Edward F. Gilbert, who met an accidental death in Kingman last July, was interested with Mr. May in the first location of the property, but later abandoned it on account of its refractory ores and low grade in gold. May was known to all the early settlers of this and our sister county as a genial, warm-hearted gentleman.

Big Feature at the Norris & Rowe Circus.

Chas. Sasse, the European agent of Norris & Rowe finally secured, after several years attempt, the troupe of Cossacks and wild Russian acrobats and dancers which bears the name of the Newskyoff Troupe. These people are natives of the wild Steppes of far off Russia. They acknowledge no sovereign and the Czar of all the Russias is wise enough to let them alone. They have a love of wild adventure but are seldom willing to venture into civilization but Mr. Sasse painted the new country of America to them in such golden colors and offered them a salary that simply seemed princely, and so they determined to come to this country. The exhibition they give is said to be wonderful and marvelous in the weirdness of their customs and ceremonies. The men are super-naturally strong. Their daring feats of expert horsemanship arouses the wildest enthusiasm. The women are the most graceful dancers and acrobats this country has ever seen. While the Newskyoff troupe are exhibiting everything else will come to a standstill, no other act being allowed to interfere with the full picturesqueness of it. The costumes worn by the troupe are wonderfully beautiful. The act will be exhibited when Norris & Rowe's circus comes to Kingman Wednesday October 30th.

One of the hardest rains in years fell in the vicinity of Little Meadows last Sunday night. The flood came down the canyon to such a depth that for a time it was feared that it would reach the tents, where a number of teamsters were camped. The road from the point of mountain below the Meadows to the mountain top, near Goldroad, was washed out so badly that it was impossible for the big teams to get over it, only the stage making the hazardous trip. Thirty men are at work repairing the break in the road to enable the oil teams to get into Goldroad with fuel for the big mill. It will be several days before the road can be fully repaired, although every effort is being made to put it in the best possible shape with the least delay. The roads were deep in dust when the rain came and it swept everything to bedrock in a twinkling. Other roads were cut up by the storm, but the Goldroad end got the big end of the deluge.

William Eugene Ingelow and Miss Anna Rosalie Finch were united in marriage at Los Angeles, California, last Wednesday. Mr. Ingelow is manager of the Western Union telegraph office at Coronado, besides being interested in several paying enterprises. He is a relative of Jean Ingelow, the poetess, and is one of the brightest and most energetic of the young men of Southern California. Many Kingman people hold him in pleasant remembrance and wish him a lifetime of married happiness.

The storms of this week have been a blessing to the country, although some damage has been done to the highways throughout the mountain and desert sections. The roads were deep in dust and big ruts were everywhere, which, owing to the dry conditions could not well be remedied. Now that the rains have come all the roads can be put in good condition with a small amount of labor.

John D. Rivard Killed.

Last Friday night at his camp 12 miles south of Franconia, John D. Rivard was accidentally killed while he slept. Early in the evening coyotes had come around the camp and J. W. Walker and Leo F. Rivard had gone out of the partly finished bunk house to get a shot at them. About midnight the two men were again awakened by the prowling coyotes and after getting their guns Walker went outside and young Rivard went over by his father's bed, where there was an opening through which he thought he might get a shot at the animals. Walker soon returned from the outside and went to where Rivard was standing in the darkness of the house. The two waited and watched at the opening for about five minutes and then Walker went back to his bed. Leo Rivard started to follow Walker and as he was passing his father's cot his forty-five colt's revolver was in some manner discharged, the heavy bullet striking Rivard, the elder, in the back, below the left shoulder, ranging forward and passing out at the nipple of the right breast. His death must have been instantaneous, there being not a sound uttered by him nor a movement of the body. Young Rivard apparently realized at once that his father was shot and fell on the bed in a faint. Lights were soon brought and the dread discovery was made that Rivard was dead. A team was hitched up and as soon as Leo Rivard could be gotten in shape he and another man went at once to Franconia, where word was sent to the family of Rivard in Los Angeles and another message to the coroner at Kingman. By order of the coroner the body was taken to Franconia, where an inquest was held Saturday afternoon. After the inquest the body was taken to Needles where it was embalmed and shipped to Los Angeles.

John D. Rivard was at one time an engineer of the old Atlantic & Pacific railroad and his family lived at Williams for nine years. He later removed to Los Angeles. He is reputed to have been the first sheriff of Cocalino county. He was a large man, weighing at the time of his death 240 pounds. When killed he was at the head of an organization, which had for its object the building of a large mill to crush the cement gravel of the Chemehuevis mountain placers and recover the gold values contained therein. He and a Mr. Gardner had planned to leave Franconia last Saturday morning for Los Angeles to make the purchase of the mill.

For Sale.

A six room house and closets, furnished complete, hot and cold water throughout, with bath room. Eight lots and good windmill.
